Ralf Hillebrand, Gregor Lersch, Ralf-C. Stradtman : Standing Ovation: Handtied Bouquets before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Standing Ovation: Handtied Bouquets:

Flower arranging continues to take pride of place in floristry. Nowhere else is creative design possible using purely floral materials. And because this field is so important, it calls for constant innovation. The newest Step in floristry, the latest innovation and trend, which is now slowly but surely making its way and is presented here for the first time in a comprehensive form, are "standing flower arrangements": freely made up, bound and freestanding in water, i.e. without the use of a supporting vase. For as the examples in this book show, the new technique opens up a completely new dimension for classical flower arrangement. Above all the close-up views reveal the technical details and clearly show that these truly are bound flower arrangements. The book aims to demonstrate that it is possible from January 1 to December 31 to create new and unusual things from all materials available in nature. So also from this point of view, "Standing Ovation" opens up new dimensions and provides significant new impulses for a new and contemporary floristry.
