5 of 5 people found the following review helpful. A wonderful resource to have on hand! By Ms Marcy Wonderful resource to have on hand. The projects listed in the book inspire you to try new things. I am amazed at the variety of materials used. This book was written even before the global "be green" campaign. For me, some of the projects are too advanced to even think about trying. But someone else previewing this book might get inspired to try something new. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. A must for creative kids By Laura Bear Such a fun book. As my daughter grows we will continually find new things to do. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. I LOVE this book - so do the kids! Why go to the mall when you can make things at home using materials recycled from around the house? This classic educational and creative text features 125 projects, carefully selected by the author to "develop natural curiosity and self-esteem," and to demonstrate "simple and important concepts that have shaped the cultures of the world." So when a child asks, "What can I do?" you can reply, "Make things! Paper from laundry lint! A bird feeder from clothes hangers! Chocolate pudding finger paintings! Beautiful fish potato prints! A cardboard box loom that teaches weaving and math! A simple pattern to sew shirts, pants, or dresses!" The author's detailed and delightful drawings fill every page "so that children just starting out and grownups who have missed out can quickly grasp the ideas."

Fresh and inspiring. . . . The majority of the ingenious projects are not found in other craft books.--Library Journal, starred review
Consistently the most useful book I've used with kids . . . [it] has been, and still is, my bible.--Cathy Wilson, author, mother of nine homeschooled kids, and teacher of youth in custody
